This one day course will look at how Relationship Based Play can be used as a powerful and cost effective method of supporting children and young people with Social, Emotional and Mental Health Difficulties. (SEMH)

By the end of the day you will come away with knowledge of how early experiences, particularly those related to neglect, trauma and loss, negatively impact upon a child's ability to form positive relationships with others and how this impacts upon their wellbeing, behaviour and needs within our schools. You will also be aware of what Relationship Based Play is and how it works to support children and young people who display a wide range of emotional, social and mental health difficulties within our schools.

We aim to:

Via a mixture of direct teaching and practical experience, equip participants with the knowledge that will enable them to plan and begin to deliver effective sessions of Relationship Based Play – either on a 1:1 or group basis upon their return to their setting and to be able to demonstrate its impact.

Participants will be able to experience a range of games and activities that are appropriate to the range of students with whom they work.

(It is important to note that although RBP closely uses the principles of Theraplay this training is not providing participants with training in Theraplay itself. It will however signpost participants to specialist Theraplay Training opportunities if they feel that they would like to pursue them.)
