

Holly

Hi! I'm Holly, a Marketing Officer with experience in green technology and app development; though I also helped to create and run a fantastic community of women interested in sustainability over on Facebook called, 'Gals for Environmental and Social Justice'. This time last year when I was completing my History degree at the University of Birmingham, I would have never predicted that I would be working in the sustainability sector (especially during a pandemic) - but, since graduating in June I fell into a career that I truly believe in and I couldn't be happier! I want to help other non-STEM graduates see that there is a place for them in the sustainability sector, and there isn't just one type of role you can take on.
