

Luke Netherclift

Luke Netherclift started his entrepreneurial journey when he 12 by setting up a cake business and going door to door selling cakes. Luke's continued his passion for entrepreneurship when he co-founded The People's Backpack, a social enterprise set up to support refugees. It was during his time of running it that he understood how important mentors, skills development and an entrepreneurial mindset can have in your professional and personal life. That is where the idea and passion for The Human Entrepreneur came from. The Human Entrepreneur is supporting early stage entrepreneurs tackle the key issues in society. Luke is a finalist sustainability and Business at Warwick University where he also works as a Warwick Innovation Fellow. Luke has also worked for a social enterprise, Food Intercept which tackles food waste and empowers minority women and has interned at Globechain: The World's Largest Reuse Marketplace and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. In his free time, Luke loves to go surfing, skateboarding as well as playing cricket and the piano!
